

Troy Gallik is a seasoned geologist with an impressive nine-year track record, spanning the entire spectrum of mineral exploration and mining industries. While his primary expertise lies in gold and precious minerals, Troy has also ventured into the realm of lithium and critical minerals exploration, primarily in Northwestern Ontario.

Since 2015, Troy has proudly held the distinction of an Ontario Prospector, personally undertaking claim staking, prospecting, and geological mapping on his own claims. In 2022, he achieved a significant milestone by successfully optioning a mineral property. Additionally, Troy has experience in claim management, demonstrating a keen proficiency in navigating the MLAS platform and preparing thorough assessment reports.

As a member of the Anishinaabeg community from the Treaty Three Territory, Troy possesses a unique perspective, coupling indigenous knowledge with extensive experience in the intricacies and implications of claims staking, exploration, and mining activities within First Nation communities. Troy is committed to fostering sustainable and mutually beneficial relationships in this domain.
